When a young treasure hunter goes to the beach for a day of playing in the surf, she dives deep under the waves to find treasures of all kinds. Some treasures have stories to tell and others are too precious to keep. It seems treasure is everywhere, but nothing could make her feel more like a queen than a perfect day at the beach with her grandfather and furry best friend. In "Hidden Treasures," we journey through fields of poverty and fatherless homes to stabbings on the streets and in inner city schools, to the hospital, to courts and prison cells, to recovery homes and back around again until, one by one, gang members finally wear themselves out - and their families - and invite God into their lives. You'll meet Pastor Jesús Sandoval, who'd been stabbed and shot by age 16, each year watching friends go to prison or their graves. You'll read about Arthur Soriano who could have been a heroic firefighter but instead battled crystal meth addiction and went to prison after a street shooting in San Diego. You'll also read mothers' stories who fervently prayed for their children for years before witnessing change, as well as young sisters who longed to see their brother only to meet him in cuffs and chains. The key to transformation is in families and communities. At weekly gatherings, this group now teaches people how to "wrap around" each other and keep kids out of a gang culture that is sometimes generational. People formerly in "the life" now work alongside the Probation Department, law enforcement, churches, schools, a local university and a multitude of non-profit organizations to intervene and educate others. In a busy world surrounded by all sorts of distractions, it becomes an uphill task to strike a balance between our work, family, and social life. Through this hustle and bustle, we find ourselves struggling to stay connected to God through His Word on a daily basis. That's where Hidden Treasures can come in handy. In Proverbs 3:4-5, the writer exhorts us to seek God's wisdom as if they were hidden treasures so that we understand the fear of the Lord and find the

it could lead to murder. Josie, the owner of Prescott's Antiques & Auctions, and her new husband, Ty, have finally found their dream home, a Victorian beauty on the beach known in the town of Rocky Point as the "Gingerbread House." It was recently vacated by Maudie Wilson, an aging widow, whose concerned nieces have moved her into a nearby assisted living facility. Josie befriends Maudie, who seems surprisingly sharp, considering her family's doubts about her soundness of mind. As Josie and Ty joyfully begin renovations on the Gingerbread House, the nieces report that Maudie, in her forgetfulness, may have left behind an old trunk, which she's desperate to get back. Sure enough, Josie finds the trunk inside a hidden compartment, and within it a jewel-encrusted box holding a sculpture of a cat. Josie can understand the sense of urgency about getting the objects back—they look valuable, and not just in the sentimental sense. But when Josie goes to return the box to Maudie, the woman has vanished. And on the floor of her empty apartment lies a corpse, a woman bludgeoned to death. Sick with worry for Maudie's safety, Josie begins to piece together the clues to the murder.
